The Booksellers Circle is about inclusivity. We are all united in our passion for getting books to readers and promoting the love of the experience of an independent bookshop.

We firmly believe bookshops are fundamental to our high streets; that's why we have made it our mission to give them the very best chances to compete on new titles. We are passionate about supporting independent booksellers; this is reflected in many of our innovative services, such as Gardlink, Hive and Home Delivery.

From The Editor

There is nothing quite like a personal recommendation from a bookseller, and it was with that in mind that we formed our initiative supporting independent booksellers, now the Booksellers Circle!

Our new brochure highlights new releases from the supporting publishers part of our initiative, and these are available to you with up to 52.5% discount. Supporting this offer is a series of reviews from our independent bookseller panel. The panel have taken the time to read through all the submitted titles and review the ones they feel with be the next big indie hit!

Our thanks to the panel for their hard work on this month's titles! We hope you love the new brochure as much as we do!

The Infinite Sadness Of Small Appliances
by Glenn Dixon

Faber & Faber
Hardback
RRP £10

An extraordinary novel that offers a unique and moving perspective on life in the future. It is set in a smart home inhabited by two elderly residents, Harold and Edie. Edie is terminally ill. As Harold reads to Edie, a sentient little Hoover becomes fascinated by the stories and decides that she deserves the name Scout after a character from 'To Kill A Mocking Bird' as she wants to be like her. When Edie dies, the household appliances unite to stop Harold from being forced out by the 'Grid' the ominous company that controls everything. At its heart, this is a beautiful and uplifting story about human connection. It's a compelling read that is emotional and philosophical.

The Enchanted Greenhouse

This glorious cosy fantasy is the second in the Spellshop series, now out in paperback. Terlu after being turned into a statue for doing magic, finds herself awoken on an island with a decaying enchanted greenhouse. There she meets a grumpy gardener and a host of talking plants who work together to try to save the doomed greenhouse. Can she find love and find herself on the island? I absolutely love Sarah Beths writing, I devoured this beautiful book.

Helpless

From the author of Bright Young Things comes a dark thriller set in the upper-class world of the American East Coast. Successful actress & director Faye seemingly has it all in Los Angeles, however, when her beloved college professor dies, she returns to the East Coast and back to her past which includes her first and most powerful love Henry. As both are now happily married and have moved on from their youthful romance, things should not be awkward between them, though beneath their perfect exteriors the deep all-encompassing love remains. Full of twists and turns this exciting novel will keep you on the edge of your seat and will remain with you long after the final page.

Gentle Things

I devoured this book! Having loved Mere, I couldn't wait to read this new one by Danielle Giles. Her way of writing characters from the past is all encompassing, and I was right there in the story with Lucy, Brigit and Kate. Not only an excellent plot line, it was full of a ghostly atmosphere, the fear a woman must surely have felt living in 1668 London and beautiful female friendship in the powerful, domineering world of men. I could not put it down and would happily read it again!

The Scandalous Ladies Football Club

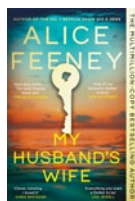

Everything about this book is heartwarming, the characters are a delight. This is a topic not often covered by the history books or in school history lessons! There were many Victorian trailblazers for women's rights, and their inspiration is all over this story. It's 1897 and Minnie is a 28-year-old teacher who loves football, so she advertises for volunteers for the very first ladies football team and gets a myriad of responses! The result is the start of something big! Full of feminine power, friendship and bags of humour, a joy of a book.

This book, in my opinion, is perfect. We provide a home for rescue chickens so I was instantly attracted to it- the chicken names are fantastic, and the message of the story is important and tender. Marigold the chicken is enough, just for being herself. Hilarious and moving, I loved this book and will immediately buy it for friends - adults and children alike!

Pog & Pickles Great Escape

This book is very humorous and teaches children the important lesson of doing things outside of their comfort zone. Using a constant rhyme scheme, it creates a sense of intrigue and the need to continue reading. The illustrations are very playful and fun, incorporating unique drawings and differing animals. The storyline is exciting, and the climax of the story is tense, making you obviously want to find out what happens to Pog and Piggie!

Seven Deadly Thorns

A fantasy that is gripping right from the start with a beautifully morally grey assassin (is there any other!) Viola has hidden her shadow magic her whole life and try's to be just an ordinary student. When her secret is discovered, the Queen sends the notorious Huntsman to kill her within seven days, or he will die! A fabulously fast paced romantasy that is full of intrigue, secrets and plenty of plot twists. This is dark academia at its best, with echoes of the Cruel Prince court intrigue and the yearning you find in the Shadow Hunters. But Waffles the pet gargoye absolutely steals the show!

Tiny Tiger Says I Don't Want To!

The second in the very popular Tiny Tiger Says series, this time the petulant protagonist has a very relatable issue - he doesn't want to go to his friend's party. However, as is usually the case, he has a blast when he gets there. Steve Small's charming art style matches perfectly with the Tiny Tiger Big Feelings theme of the series to bring us another delightful entry.
