The Thing About Giants

by Christopher Galvin

Folklore, fantasy and adventure combine in the BIGGEST debut of the year. Jacq is the daughter of giant hunters. Corman is a young giant on his first trip above ground. Two stories, two lives and two worlds collide. Jacq Dyer is the daughter of renowned giant hunters and is soon to follow in their footsteps. Everyone knows that giants are violent, senseless creatures … aren't they? But when an accident leaves Jacq lost and injured in the wilderness, she comes face-to-face with Corman, a young giant. As they uncover the truth about each other's worlds, they find that not all tall tales are true – and that it's up to them to set things right.

WORDS THAT HOLD THE COSMOS

A letter from Zoulfa Katouh

This book began from one thought on a random day. I can't even tell you why, but I remember very clearly thinking. Why aren't there any books where the main character is called Jihad?

The meaning of the word 'Jihad' is deeper than the ocean. In that one word lies the idea of struggling to live in this world. Of being alive. Of standing up for what's right when everyone is against you. 'Jihad' is reaching for your dreams, holding your heart in your hands, and being who you are at the times when it's the hardest to be true to yourself. 'Jihad' is bravery.

But Arabic words are often vilified in the mainstream media. On more than one occasion when I have been talking to my mother on the phone in Arabic, I have had the people around me ask if I was angry. This notion doesn't just happen. When Hollywood casts Arab Muslim characters, the actors are almost never Arab and when they speak Arabic (even if correct), the tone is often harsh and aggressive. People watch these movies and TV shows, and this racist stereotyping programs their perception regarding Arabs and Muslims and their language.

This story is a love letter to the Arabic language and the meanings behind our words. This book is taking back the narrative. Because Arabic is a beautiful, lyrical language that holds the entire cosmos in its letters.

My character Jihad was born from my desire to show a Muslim teenager living in a Western society that is her home, but also longing for a home she's never known except through her mother's stories. Jihad, like many Arab immigrant children, is a child of war, with parents who fled their country because it was no longer a home.

In this story, you follow Jihad Dabbagh, a seventeen-year-old artist, who loses the ability to see colours after her mother dies. Her world is stuck in black and white. When she starts her senior year at a new school, she faces discrimination but when she discovers a sketchbook that once belonged to her mother, she starts painting her mother's story, and her drawings become murals all over New York. The world is watching, listening, and Jihad has much to say and paint. Slowly, the colours start coming back.

While loss is one of the themes of this story, it's not the main one. Lemon Trees had hope, Ocean has healing. This world may be cruel, but there are good people in it. We can be those good people. In this story, you will find a girl who discovers how to be happy again and a boy who helps her find that path.

I'm adamant that my books are never in a box. Jihad may be Muslim and a hijabi, and she suffers prejudice and bullying because of that. Jamie may make a choice that allies him more closely with his Muslim friend… But this book is for everyone–Not only to learn from, but also to take comfort in. We all go through hardships. We all want to live a life that's true for us, and in doing so, we have to make brave decisions.

I'm so thankful to have this as my second book. In it, I exercised my own jihad in writing a book that is true to who I am and to the love I have for Syria. I wanted to write a book that crosses boundaries and shows how we are all human. I can't wait for you to meet Jihad and Jamie, and discover what makes them special and wonderful.

And above all, I hope this book makes you braver in your life and kinder to yourself

With love and hope

Relatively Guilty

by William McIntyre

9781036712365 | Vinci Books | £9.99 | P

Follow the trials of Scots criminal lawyer Robbie Munro as he joins battle in the fight for truth and justice - hoping truth and justice don't win too often because it's terribly bad for business. A policeman with a caved-in skull, his young wife found clutching the blood-stained murder weapon; it all looks pretty open and shut until Robbie detects the faint whiff of a defence and closes in on a witness who might cast a precious doubt on proceedings. So why is it, the nearer he gets to the truth and a possible acquittal, that Robbie's murder client becomes more and more eager to opt for a life sentence?

9781037205316 | Bloomsbury | £20.00 | H

When Daphne notices an older gentleman following her around the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, she doesn't expect it to be Eddie - her former stepfather. Married to her mother for a short time when Daphne was nine, she hasn't seen Eddie for many years; not since the fateful event that changed the direction of both their lives. Meeting again now, Daphne and Eddie feel that time has fallen away. A warm, intimate tale about family, memory and connection, from the bestselling author of Tom Lake and The Dutch House.

The Castle Of Stories

by Matt Cain

9781919443904 | Pansy | £9.99 | P

When 45-year-old Adam inherits a rundown farmhouse and castle in Tuscany from a great uncle he didn't know existed, he quits his job in Manchester to renovate the property. He's thrilled his boyfriend of two years, newly divorced and out-of-the-closet Theo, is joining him. But at the last minute, Theo's children have to come too. And they're hostile to Adam, immune to the beauty of the rural location - and scared of the resident lizards. As Adam explores the crumbling walls of the castle and sorts through his uncle's possessions, he discovers some dark family secrets. But could they finally allow him to break free from the pain of the past?

Alexander

by Edmund Richardson

9781526658173 | Bloomsbury | £25.00 | H

God, King, Man. A stunningly written new biography of Alexander the Great, based on a series of important new discoveries and the author's own translations of source material from twelve ancient languages. For centuries, historians have told his story, yet Alexander has remained a mystery. But now, the ruins of his cities have emerged from the bottom of the sea and the dust of Central Asian hillsides. The diaries of Babylonian astronomers who knew him have been deciphered. The tombs of his ancestors have been unearthed. For the first time, instead of the legend, we can meet Alexander the man.

Mother Mary Comes To Me

by Arundhati Roy

9781405978477 | Penguin Books | £12.99 | P

The incredible first memoir from the Booker-winning radical icon Arundhati Roy, author of The God of Small Things. 'Heart-smashed' by the death of the mother she ran from at age eighteen and shaken by the intensity of her response, Arundhati Roy began this remarkable memoir - a soaring account, both intimate and inspiring, of how the author became the person and the writer she is: shaped by circumstance, but above all by her relationship to her extraordinary, singular mother, Mary, who she describes as 'my shelter and my storm'. Mother Mary Comes to Me is an ode to freedom, a tribute to thorny love and savage grace - a memoir like no other.

Power Play

by George E Osborn

9781035423286 | Wildfire | £22.00 | H

Video Games, Politics and the Battle for Global Influence. In 'Power Play,' leading game industry expert George E. Osborn reveals how video games - the world's largest entertainment medium - are being used by autocrats, populists and violent extremists to influence the real world around us. Video games create spaces where people talk, share ideas and build identities that bleed into our reality. And whilst democracies have underestimated the potential for influence in this space, others have seized the opportunity. This is why Russia has been funding the development of video games designed to promote their world view.

The Ocean Would Paint Me Blue

by Zoulfa Katouh

9781526648594 | Bloomsbury Children's Books | £12.99 | H

What if you felt like you'd cried all the colours away? The heart-wrenching new story of friendship, loss and identity from the author of international bestseller As Long As the Lemon Trees Grow. Joining an exclusive high school should be a fresh start for Jihad after her mother's sudden death. But she's the only Muslim student there; her hijab and even her name make her new classmates suspicious. As tension mounts, she finds refuge in an old sketchbook and in the stories her mama used to tell her. She is determined to focus on making it to art school and a brighter future.

Pablo & Splash Viking Voyage

by Sheena Dempsey

9781526690876 | Bloomsbury Children's Books | £8.99 | P

Age 7 to 9. Time-travelling penguins Pablo and Splash are on board a Viking longship in this hilarious full-colour graphic novel. Fans of Bunny vs Monkey or InvestiGATORS will love it. When Pablo and Splash tell their cheeky friend Benji about the Vikings and their impressive longships, Benji is amazed. He's desperate to steal a time machine and go plundering for treasure with those ancient warriors. Our time-travelling heroes Pablo and Splash must get to Viking-era Ireland in time to warn the monks about the imminent invasion - and make their own mark on history.

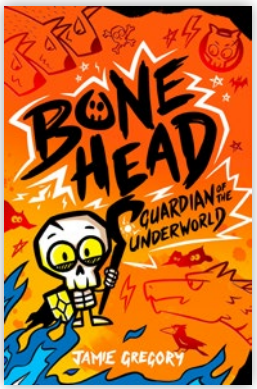

Bone Head Guardian Of The Underworld

by Jamie Gregory

9780702348822 | Scholastic | £7.99 | P

Age 9+. The chaos and anarchy of Bunny vs Monkey meets the diary format of Loki and the sparring character dynamics of Blackadder in this two-colour, highly illustrated, laugh-out-loud debut! The underworld is a dangerous place. It's all fiery and there's marauding dragons and all sorts of other critters you wouldn't want to run into. Demise, aka Bone Head, isn't bothered about any of this. Why? Because he's a skeleton guardian of the underworld - and not just any guardian. He thinks he's the BEST and is determined to prove it... with catastrophic results... Demise just wants to impress his Big Boss, Hades, god of the underworld.

BOOKS 1-4 : BEAUTY AND THE BEAST RETELLING

The kingdom Finley has lived her entire life in wasn't always so dark and full of doom. When she was young it was a beautiful, lively place to live. But that was before – before the curse, before the demon king took over their kingdom, before the rest of the world forgot they existed. Now things are mostly terrible, but Finley hasn't given up. She has a talent for mixing healing remedies from native plants, and reads, researches, and experiments as much as possible to keep her family and her village healthy. Or at least alive.
Until one night when she's gathering supplies that grow in the forest, and she crosses paths with the beast that lives there. She piques his interest, and no one's life is ever the same after that.

Welcome to the The Harrow, last survivor of London's once-notorious muckraking magazines. John Salmon, its battle-hardened editor, and his misfit journalists have fought for years to keep it alive, but extinction looms. Neither the arrival of trainee Danny Roth nor a local gangland killing looks set to change that. But as John reluctantly allows Danny to investigate the murder, they soon find themselves entangled in a story that could save The Harrow - but might cost them their lives... The funny, gripping thriller shortlisted for The Orwell Prize 2025.

She survives four queens. Will she fall to a tyrant? Jane Boleyn watches from the shadows of the Tudor court. Where nothing is more powerful than a secret - or more deadly. As the Boleyns rise, Jane rises with them. But the king's love is a fickle thing. And when the royal gaze turns elsewhere, Jane uses the only weapon she has: her voice. To survive in this dazzling, dangerous world she has mastered many masks: loving wife, devoted sister, and obedient spy. Now she must step out of the shadows. She might outlive her rivals. She might know the court's darkest secrets. But power rests on the edge of a tyrant king's sword. Where will it fall next?

Alex used to break into other people's houses. These days though, he's turned his life around. He still breaks into homes and offices - but now it's legal, to test the security for the rightful owners. He's got a job, a regular income, a roof over his head, even a girlfriend. For once, it's all going right. And then he takes a job he shouldn't, and steals a souvenir - a vial of white powder - from an executive's desk in an office he's just entered. It's pretty clear what the powder is. Only it proves to be something quite different, and soon Alex's problems begin in earnest...

What you want isn't always what you need... In 2006, Beth didn't expect to get pregnant at seventeen. Nor did she think she'd lose the name and address of the father of her child. Swept up in romance on her French exchange, all she remembers is that his hair smelt like mangoes. Now, in 2026, at her school reunion, she opens the time capsule she wrote to herself at that time... When 38-year-old Beth opens the letter she wrote to her future self when she was 17, it provides a clue for tracking down the father of her child in this uplifting, funny and intelligent novel about the many versions of ourselves we could become.

Alex, Nancy and Eva Fisher. Three grown-up sisters; each wonderful and imperfect in their own individual ways. And loved equally by their parents, Vivienne and Patrick. Or so they thought. Right up to the moment when, during a family party, Patrick inadvertently lets slip that he has a favourite. While they try to gloss over it, this begins to unravel everything the sisters thought they knew. As their past is re-written, secrets and lies are uncovered, and the Fisher clan implodes in a way they could never have dreamed possible. But will it take falling apart to bring them closer together?

Burgess explains that he was asked to create a beginner's abridged version of about 200 pages with a commentary to link the passages of Joyce's original text and an explanatory preface. The surviving notes towards 'A Shorter Ulysses' suggest that Burgess envisaged that A Shorter Ulysses would follow a similar format. The document was discovered in Burgess's house in Bracciano, which was purchased in the early 1970s, and thus probably dates from this period.

KAMIYA, ALEJANDRA

£12.99 Published 18/06/26

In stories of exquisite compression, Japanese-Argentine writer Alejandra Kamiya conjures absences, shadows and all that must remain unsaid. As dawn breaks, a woman prepares to make a perfect breakfast for her husband and son, while a subtle note of disquiet grows louder. A Japanese soldier resolutely obeys a command as precise as it is inexplicable. Two girls discover themselves through electrically charged games, which they will recall in letters for the rest of their lives. Enigmatic yet sharply clear, this is a book of quietly shattering epiphanies from a unique voice in international fiction.

1801, Sidmouth. The Austen family descends upon a fashionable seaside resort in Devonshire for a six-week holiday. Jane's brother, Frank, is on leave from the Royal Navy, and dearly wishes to unite his sister with his friend Captain Peter Parker. But another holidaymaker, a handsome stranger, catches sight of Jane and is determined to make her acquaintance. This rival to Captain Parker is Samuel Rose: a lawyer, literary man and abolitionist. As the weeks pass, Jane's relationship with both men brings about unexpected surprises. A gorgeously escapist novel about the summer the greatest romance novelist fell in love.

Sylvie is only happy when she is at therapy. This is because Sylvie is in love with her therapist. She wants to kiss her and roll around on the floor with her. She thinks about her every second they're not together (roughly 167 hours and 10 minutes per week). She's aware she has an obsession, but whether it is - as her therapist suggests - a case of extreme 'erotic transference', or a lost person's need to connect, Sylvie isn't sure... A tragicomic and utterly original debut novel following a woman trying to make sense of her life and herself as she falls in love with her therapist.

A powerful reimagining of the Norse myth of Hel of the underworld. Nothing, on earth or below it, freezes faster than the worthless heart. Before she was a hideous monster, the queen of the underworld was simply Hel. But cast as a girl out of lofty Asgard, realm of the gods, by Odin the Allfather, Hel's fate as the terrible goddess of death is sealed. Half beauty, half crone, she has reigned for aeons in the starless darkness of Niflheim, grimly welcoming the most pitiful of death's travellers to her ice-locked prison. Until one day a memory shifts, and she is forced to seek out the sun in Midgard, where humans have made their home.

Or, Why We Need Fairy Tales. Fairy tales take us to a world where magic is commonplace, where wishing works, where the conflicts in our hearts are literalized in the world around us. The living, vibrant, democratic genre of the fairy tale draws stories from people and places all over the globe, and spreads them just as broadly. Yet in a world exhausted by war, famine, climate devastation, and political strife, are these tales still valid? Are they merely an escape, or are they something more? The eminent folklorist Jack Zipes argues here that fairy tales remain relevant and powerful, that they still speak truth to power.

Imelda, now a young mother and a visiting radiographer to the prison hospital, struggles with questions of life and death, crime and punishment: How can one control a car with confidence? Are drunken drivers ordinary criminals? Are ordinary lives a series of escape attempts? A timely book that provides comedy as it raises more serious questions about human society, and during the present international prison crisis when the UK prison system is on the verge of collapse.

LANDSCAPE WITH QUESTION
QUINN, LEEANNE

9781800175617 P CARCANET PRESS LTD
£12.99 Published 25/06/26

This new collection from award-winning Irish poet Leeanne Quinn presents a pan-European meditation on human geography and landscape that moves from Ireland's coastal landscapes to the River Danube in Vienna, Austria. An intricately patterned quest narrative in which a nomadic speaker documents their journey through a series of landscapes that resist straightforward delineations. A collection about reading and finding meaning through the act of reading. A book that sees poetry as question and as quest. The first creative study to extensively engage with the life and work of one of Ireland's leading Modernist artists, Nano Reid.

DOOR TO DOOR POET
MCCABE, ROWAN

9781785634543 P EYE BOOKS
£10.99 Published 04/06/26

My Adventures Across England. What do you think would happen if you knocked on a stranger's door and offered to write a poem for them? Rowan McCabe wanted to find out. In doing so, he became the world's first Door-to-Door Poet. He banged on people's doors and asked what was important to them. He then went away and wrote a poem about it, free of charge, which he brought back and performed on their doorstep. This is the story of his adventures. Writing with warmth, honesty and humour, McCabe shines a light on a range of communities as he explores what is important to us today.

TALKING IN BED
LARKIN, PHILIP

9780571400577 H FABER & FABER POETRY
£10.00 Published 18/06/26

In lines perfectly constructed and as beautiful as they are plain-spoken, Philip Larkin found a way of delineating people's most difficult emotions giving them back to them in images and formulations that help them both comprehend and contain themselves. His is a fine-tuning that turns true and kind more truthfully into not untrue and not unkind. These are poems to live with and through.

LOVE OF MY LIFE
HANSON, WHITNEY

9781529442281 H QUERCUS
£16.99 Published 06/06/26

Poetry for rediscovery. Using the metaphor of fires, the book is structured in three sections Burning, Ashes, and Reclamation - to reflect the cycles of destruction, numbness, and renewal that accompany deep inner work. Through themes of identity, loss, healing, and emotional reconstruction, the collection explores what it means to unlearn inherited beliefs, confront the weight of the past, and slowly rebuild a relationship with oneself, others, and the world. This is not a book primarily about romantic love, but about reengaging with life by confronting the past and reconnecting with a sense of self.

CHORUS OF EARS
RILEY, DENISE

9781035095964 H MACMILLAN
£12.99 Published 25/06/26

On 'the voice of the poem'. What, Denise Riley asks, might be discovered about the purpose of poetry, its originary point within our language and more yet besides, when we liberate it from the persona of the author? In allowing the poem to speak, what might we hear? 'One of the most eloquent thinkers about our life in language' - The Sunday Times.

WORRYING ROSE
TOWERS, KATHARINE

9781035087945 P MACMILLAN
£12.99 Published 11/06/26

These poems distil Katharine Towers' thinking about women, creativity and solitude: there are nuns and female hermits, alongside writers and artists such as Nan Shepherd and Maggi Hambling whose voices are harnessed by Towers in her explorations of the state of being alone. The closing sequence of 'The Worrying Rose' is a poetic interaction with the work and life story of Ada Lovelace - mathematician and writer and daughter of the poet Lord Byron. Here are poems about maths, horse-riding, skating, and about Lovelace's fascination with light, rainbows, and the human nervous system.

SPARROW ON THE ROOFTOP LONG, RACHEL

9781784746582 P CHATTO & WINDUS
£12.99 Published 11/06/26

'Sparrow on the Rooftop' tells a story of new love: the summer-like giddiness of it, the ferocity of obsession, and the stark hollowing of absence. Alongside this affair, and unleashed by its intensity, unfolds another story, half-buried, about our young narrator's uneasy relationship with her body. A diamond-sharp study of toxic love, crisis and recovery, at once moving and whip-smart, from prizewinning poet Rachel Long.

MAKING THE WEDDING DRESS
WILLS, JACKIE

9781784633844 P SALT PUBLISHING
£10.99 Published 14/06/26

Jackie Wills gives readers the exceptional at the heart of daily life, invites us to suspend disbelief, enable the surreal. She begins 'Making the Wedding Dress' with a quote from a handbook on sewing and asks what can be fixed, what does it mean to make a daughter's wedding dress. The collection fans out to explore bullying, money, trade, rats and sinkholes. A third section questions how humans relate to other species, speculates on a worm's opinion of people, the communal life of starlings. The book ends on ideas of exits and entrances, home, absences within a family and the fragility of care.

£20.00 Published 12/05/26

The Long, Sensational Life of Lady Chatterley's Lover. DH Lawrence's 'Lady Chatterley's Lover' is one of the best-known and most resonant works of the twentieth century. Originally considered obscene and unpublishable in numerous countries, its scandalous story of class divide and the English countryside is infamous. But, since the 1920s, we have repeatedly re- created Lady Chatterley, from film and TV to music and tourism. Guy Cuthbertson tells the colourful story of the novel's journey through the last hundred years.

How Reclaiming Girlhood Can Redefine Womanhood. It is a truth universally acknowledged that boys will be boys and girls have to grow up... Over the past decade, girlhood has repainted the cultural landscape pink. From Taylor Swift's The Era's Tour to Barbiemania, this nostalgia for girlhood has become a billion-dollar business, seen in the music we listen to, the clothes we wear, and the 2000s movies (and their long-awaited sequels) we watch on repeat. For far too long we have been presented with a false choice between womanhood and girlhood - this book is a celebration of a new way of being where we can fully embrace both.

Beau Travail (1998) is Claire Denis' bold, sensuous masterpiece. Loosely based on Herman Melville's Billy Budd, Sailor (1924), the film explores the complexities of desire, identity, and power within an all-male group of French Foreign Legionnaires stationed at a coastal outpost in the former colony of Djibouti, in East Africa. The film cemented Denis' position as a leading auteur and visual poet. In this book, Corinn Columpar positions the film as a cinematic bid for freedom. She examines its formal innovations - particularly the use of the gaze, voice, and movement - to explain how Denis produces exhilarating possibilities.

In this compelling study, Daisuke Miyao explores Jean-Pierre Melville's cult 1967 thriller Le Samourai, a film that unfolds in a coolly stylised Paris where the paths of a contract killer, Jef Costello (Alain Delon), and the police commissaire pursuing him (Francois Perier) fatally intersect. Despite its title, Le Samourai, is not a sword-clashing tale of feudal Japan. Rather, Miyao suggests that the film's philosophical framework draws on both existentialism and the samurai moral philosophy of bushido, or 'the way of the warrior', and considers how these philosophies may help explain Jef Costello's identity crisis and his concluding act of self-annihilation.

Featuring interviews with some of her well-known fans, including Ru Paul and Sean Hayes, this is a celebration of the album where Cher challenged the ageist pop industry and re-solidified herself as a force to be reckoned with. By 1998, Cher seemed fated to fade off into the pop sunset. Her time of being half of pop music's It couple, of releasing chart-topping singles, of having her own TV show, in starring in box office breaking movies, was coming to an end. But then Believe and a new invention called auto-tune changed everything.

In the UK in the early '70s, in response to the glitz of glam and the excess of prog there emerged a DIY, back to basics scene known as pub rock: No-fuss, grass roots rock'n'roll bands playing in tight, sweaty rooms to packed throngs in the Victorian pubs of north London. Pub rock was a relative flash in the pan, lasting only a handful of years, but it produced a seismic shift, bridging the gap between rock's Baroque period and the ensuing punk and new wave scene, and crucially, restoring the visceral connection between artist and audience. This book explores the history of the genre's evolution, and examines its significant and enduring legacy.

The Story of Sectarianism in the Modern Middle East. Sectarianism saturates our conversations about the Middle East, its politics and society, and the divide between Sunni and Shi'a captures headlines the world over. But in reality, sectarian difference is far from a uniquely Islamic phenomenon. Throughout the region, religious and communitarian schisms play out in politics, economics and theology, across religions and borders. But how did these divisions come to be? And who is gaining from them? Simon Mabon examines sectarianism in the modern Middle East, moving beyond our simplistic conceptions of ancient religious hatreds and violence.

Hunt asks the key questions: How deliverable are the changes needed by a Labour, Conservative or Reform government? How do you get the economy growing despite dangerous levels of debt? How do you sell long term reforms when leaders have so little political capital? But countering pessimism needs solutions not just assertions, and they need to be realistic - plans that politicians can actually deliver in a democratic system and the majority of the electorate can get behind.

A New History of Women and Power. From Cleopatra to Grace Kelly, an epic new history of royal women that shatters the myths we have built around them. Stories about royal women form some of our most foundational myths about femininity, and yet their legacies have been almost entirely constructed by the words and images of men. In 'Regina,' celebrated historian Kate Williams leads us deep into the world of queens, empresses, princesses, mistresses and ladies-in-waiting, uncovering how their ambitions were shaped, celebrated and often thwarted.

£25.00 Published 04/06/26

From an acclaimed historian, a sweeping study of the past, present, and future of the Great Powers, revealing the new rules of global leadership. From the dawn of the modern era to the end of the Cold War, global history was defined by rivalries between great powers. Between 1989 and the year 2000, great power rivalry temporarily gave way to globalization, with liberal democracy on the march and national chauvinism seemingly in retreat. But events of the past decade have made one thing abundantly clear: the great powers are back.

A wild journey with the lost goddesses of Britain. As Kim Willis drifts from the traditional path of marriage and motherhood, she yearns for a new set of stories to light her way. Here, she is pulled towards the source of the Severn, hearing whispers of ancient matriarchs: shape-shifting enchantresses, scaly nymphs and goddesses who once commanded our lands. Journeying through the oldest mythologies of Great Britain, 'No Fair Maidens' brings magical heroines to the fore, so that we might reclaim our sense of what it means to be a woman: restoring our strength, wonder and connection to this place we call home.

Royal Women and Their Battles. Saints or sinners? Perfect princesses or difficult duchesses? Monarchy's saviours or its destroyers? They rank among the world's most famous women - and the most misunderstood. Throughout history, royal women have been sanitised and sanctified by supporters, distorted and demonised by critics, pitted against each other, and misrepresented by the media. In this extraordinary portrait, journalist Catherine Mayer examines the lives of the central players, and the echoes and parallels that have run throughout history.

Juan Carlos of Spain. A riveting and deeply researched account of King Juan Carlos's epic fall from grace. Paul Preston, the preeminent historian of modern Spain, here lays bare the complex web of financial and sexual excess that led to the hero's vertiginous downfall. He tells the story of the King's very public implosion and identifies the seeds of self-destruction in Juan Carlos's unhappy childhood and upbringing. In so doing, Preston also throws a penetrating light on the massive scale of corruption within the Spanish establishment and sets the King's downfall against Spain's own identity crisis as it continues to grapple with its fascist past.

Among the giants of the Scottish Enlightenment, the name of James Hutton is overlooked. Yet his 'Theory of the Earth' revolutionised the way people think about how the planet was formed and laid the foundation for the science of geology. He was in his time a doctor, a farmer, a businessman, a chemist yet he described himself as a philosopher - a seeker after truth. He shunned status and official position, refused to give up his strong Scots accent and vulgar speech, loved jokes and could start a party in an empty room. This book uses new sources and original documents to bring the man to life and places him firmly among the geniuses of his time.

What is England, and who are the English? The man who first posed and answered these questions lived 1,200 years ago in Northumberland. The Venerable Bede spent almost his whole life in two monasteries looking over the North Sea, far from the centres of civilisation. This is the first biography to explore in detail the life of Dark Age historian, The Venerable Bede. Based on the most up-to-date research and historical and archaeological evidence, this book pieces together Bede's life and those of the monks and nuns, warriors and kings, farmers and merchants who made up the kingdoms in the realm of Britain.

Confessions of a Vegan Cattle Rancher. This book illuminates the realities of animal agriculture through tracing the author's journey from a poor upbringing to life as the wife of a Texas cattle rancher. More than a memoir, this is a story of spiritual awakening and ethical transformation. It reveals the shared ground between ranchers and vegans - a commitment to compassion, tradition, and sustainability - while challenging the foundations of animal agriculture. Through her journey, Renee King-Sonnen invites readers to consider their own relationship with animals, the food they eat, and the possibility of living with greater compassion.

Writing My Way Home. In 'Sun Country', Howard Cunnell returns to the southern England beachlands of his boyhood after the death of his mother. A love letter to the changing coast and sea, the book is alive with light and shadow, where the white spaces between words are as charged with tension and power as the words themselves. It is a reckoning with the things we inherit - silence and absence, stories told and untold - and the transgression involved in turning a life into art. A beautifully written, courageous and deeply moving journey from sorrow to acceptance, from loss to hope, shimmering with coastal light and hard-won wisdom.

How Our Children Live Now. During his time as Children's Laureate Frank Cottrell-Boyce visited schools that had been forced to make permanent homes in temporary buildings, where teachers doubled up as social workers, therapists and nutritionists. He talked to children abandoned within the prison system, seen to have forfeited their right to the second chance a good education might provide. He met families shuttled from one hotel room to another as they awaited the outcome of asylum decisions. And he talked to the extraordinary array of people working to change the fortunes of the young people around them.

Brian Epstein and the Making of The Beatles. Brian Epstein didn't just manage the Beatles - he transformed them into the most famous band the world has ever known. 'Mr Moonlight' reveals the depths of Brian's many trials and tribulations - how he almost lost the Beatles to organised crime; the antisemitism and homophobia he endured even at the height of his success; his intense and fraught relationship with John Lennon; and the haunting circumstances of his lonely death during the so-called Summer of Love. At once revelatory and deeply moving, 'Mr Moonlight' restores Brian Epstein to his rightful place at the heart of the Beatles' story.

Culture, politics and pleasure in the single woman's kitchen. The kitchen has always been a complex space for women: a place of labour and gendered expectations, as well as a site of nourishment, care and company. But how does this change when you're alone? Eli Davies explores what happens when food is uncoupled from domestic duty and romantic relationships and what it means to cook or not for yourself and by yourself. With warmth, humour and insight, 'The Spinster Cookbook' explores shopping and leftovers, solo meals and dinner parties for one, joy and grief and the politics of living on your own.

This is the untold story of Isaac Lubbock (1891-1961), an unsung hero, who during World War II was the only scientist working at the cutting edge of both jet propulsion and liquid fuel rocketry, two world-changing technologies. In 1940 he invented the combustion chamber for Frank Whittle's jet, without which it couldn't fly. In 1942 he invented the first British liquid fuel rocket. This enabled him to convince Churchill that the V2 threat was real, in the face of acrimonious scorn from the scientific establishment. He received no public recognition. This book aims to rectify the injustice done to one of the great British inventors and engineers.

Depressed and suicidal, Helen was admitted to a psychiatric ward and sectioned under the Mental Health Act. At her lowest, she almost succeeded in taking her own life. But somehow, she endured and later, she recovered. 'Love lay down beside me and we wept' sprang from these emotionally shattering experiences. Amid the horror though, there were moments of pure comedy and unexpected comradeship. And of course, plenty of material for writing. This is a profoundly moving and masterful account of one woman's physical and psychological catastrophe.

ANNI ALBERS A LIFE
WEBER, NICHOLAS FOX
9780300269376 H YALE UNIVERSITY PRESS
£25.00 Published 23/06/26

The first major biography on Anni Albers traces the complex personality and influential artistic career of the groundbreaking modern artist. Anni Albers (1899-1994) was a pioneer of twentieth-century modernism. As a textile designer, weaver, writer, and graphic artist, she inspired a reconsideration of fabrics as an art form, both in their functional roles and as wall hangings, and took the processes of printmaking into uncharted territory. This intimate biography draws on personal conversations with Albers from the 1970s up until Albers's death and on unprecedented archival research to tell a fresh and full story of Albers's life.

Why Our Minds Are Making Us Sick. In this revelatory study, neuroscientist Helen Pilcher explores the hidden impact of the 'nocebo effect' - the placebo's evil twin. Medical studies have proven the nocebo effect to cause pain, nausea, paralysis, seizures, and even blindness. The nocebo effect impacts how we grow sick and grow old, explains why people who don't have food allergies have dietary intolerances, and why adults and teenagers are equally susceptible to catching tics through social media. A groundbreaking investigation into the nocebo effect - the placebo's evil twin - urging us to rethink the mind-body connection.

The mind-altering power of the psychopaths among us. We all know what psychopathy is. Or, at least, we think we do. For decades, we have looked at psychopaths as something 'other': as monsters, or bogeyman. But psychopaths don't just exist on our screens - they exist in our communities offices and, sometimes, in our very own families. The Psychopath Effect is the story of the psychopaths among us, those who are searingly antagonistic yet still have a job. Those who approach empathy as an optional extra, yet still have a family.

In this book, evolutionary psychologist Steve Stewart-Williams tackles some of science's most controversial questions: How do men and women differ? Where do the differences come from? And how do they shape modern life? Avoiding the extremes of either overstating or denying the differences, he argues that, rather than trying to make men and women identical, people should strive for a world where bias and barriers are eliminated, and where people are free to be themselves whether they conform to gender norms or defy them.

War came to North Africa in June 1940. But it would be another year and half before a newly-formed SAS went into action for the first time. Until then, the job of taking the fight to the enemy in their own backyard belonged to an elite, top secret band of brothers called the Long Range Desert Group. Drawing on his own decade's service with UK Special Forces, author Titch Cormack brings to life the extraordinary, action-packed but little-known story of Britain's original rogue heroes like never before.

The story of Britain's most talented and feared WW2 general. An important new insight into Field Marshal Montgomery, Britain's most famous Second World War general. Known to all as 'Monty', Bernard Law Montgomery's greatest achievement was to give the British Army self-belief after Dunkirk. No other general was so hated by his peers; no other general was held in such affection by the ordinary ranks and by the public. Now, fifty years since his death, Montgomery remains a highly controversial figure. This balanced, accessible and fresh account of one of Britain's most complex war heroes looks beyond the battlefield.

By 1942, Churchill faced a vastly different war than the one he'd inherited from Neville Chamberlain. Britain was no longer alone; the Soviets were now an unlikely ally in the East, and Pearl Harbor had finally pushed America into action. Yet the scale of violence remained unchanged. On average, seven British men, women and children were killed every hour of the Second World War. This book, reveals the war as it was lived - from the battlefields to the ration books, in the War Ministry and in the air raid shelters. Mixing social history with dramatic storytelling, this is a definitive account of the war that reshaped the world.

An Ancient Guide to a Happy Life. A vivid new translation in which the Stoic philosopher argues that virtue is the only path to contentment. Why are so many people unhappy when happiness can be attained by anyone who simply lives virtuously? That question prompted Seneca, the great Stoic philosopher of the early Roman empire, to write 'On the Happy Life', and he continued to seek answers in his Moral Epistles. In 'How to Live', Seneca biographer and translator James Romm presents vivid new versions of passages from both works, distilling Seneca's passionate and inspiring argument for a path to perfect contentment, no matter what befalls us.

This thoroughly updated 14th edition of Bradt's Madagascar remains the leading and by far the most detailed guidebook to this unique African island nation - a place like nowhere else on Earth. Its authors are both established Madagascar experts: Hilary Bradt, who first visited in 1976 and has returned roughly 35 times, and Daniel Austin, who has visited 30 times across 20 years and continues to spend several months a year there. The world's oldest - and fourth-largest - island, Madagascar is fascinating not only zoologically and botanically, but culturally, linguistically, historically and geologically too.

WORK IN PROGRESS

YOU DON'T HAVE TO HAVE IT ALL FIGURED OUT

Work in Progress is a practical, jargon-free series for anyone building confidence in their career whether stepping into a new role, switching paths, or simply figuring things out along the way. Designed for everyone, these books offer essential guidance on the things no one teaches you like speaking up, navigating setbacks, managing your time, and understanding what "professional" actually means.
